From the first item on my website, through all of the challenges I've been through, and the heartache, confusion, and resistance I've encountered along the way, I wanted to share a little bit about why I decided to write a book on the subject of this website. It's something I have been thinking about for quite some time and have spent quite some time researching and talking to others who have also been struggling with these various dynamics. My book will be titled "Asperger's Syndrome: Developing a New Foundation for your Child's Life" and it will be published in January of 2014 by Write...for the World Press. It will contain 12 chapters dealing with, Asperger's, Hyperacusis, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Borderline Personality Disorder, Dyslexia, Gender Identity Dysphoria, and Sexual Dysphoria. All of these areas contain students and/or families that I have worked with over the years. Also included are very different families of children that I was fortunate to meet as I was visiting my son's autism/Asperger's school. One of the kids that I met was a boy that was transitioning to girl and had no idea why. I've discussed with families who have struggled with Asperger's, and have even been contacted by some of the parents of autistic children who have become very ill and are being treated

Reading apps can save you a lot of time and still be educational. You can even create personal note books that are portable and can be shared with your kids. Take note of your kid's unique interests and try to make note apps that will cater to them. A note app can be a lifesaver when your kid is in trouble. Even if it is a minor matter, you can call a kid's phone and right away, his phone will ring with your voice mail and the kids know that you have taken note of what they did. He will also be able to listen to your voice and know that you will be busy and thus, he should be quiet for the time being. Reading apps are also an added advantage. Your kids can choose to read books that are suitable for their level and at the same time, can have access to music and other audio books as long as the device has a headphone jack. Your kids will be able to choose from a wide variety of books and even if you are not a fan of reading as a hobby, you can read them aloud to them. Reading apps are meant for kids, but there are also educational apps that your kids can use. You can use these apps to study basic mathematics
